

Two Critically Important Parenting & Co-Parenting Courses for ALL Divorcing/Divorced Parents

All our therapists and many of our family law attorneys require clients who are parents to take the following two courses. Both provide certificates of completion, and save you considerable amounts of money whenever there are any differences between parents related to Parenting strategies, Co-Parenting and/or mediating a Parenting Plan (custody).

Most importantly, you increase the likelihood of buffering your children more effectively from the stress and trauma that a high conflict divorce/custody dispute typically is for all family members, and especially for children. For co-parenting work, mediation and collaborative divorce work, you save money by knowing better what's expected of you, and what kinds of skills-building to expect from any related therapist, collaborative divorce coach or mediator of your Parenting Plan.

For therapists seeing only the child(ren) of divorce, parents have 2 months from the time a child begins therapy to complete these courses or, barring a serious crisis, therapy may be interrupted until the parents invest in completing these courses.
